NEA and GHN-Online Form Strategic Relationship

Relationship delivers Powerful online Electronic Claim & Electronic Attachment Solutions to Healthcare Industry

Atlanta, GA— National Electronic Attachment, Inc. (NEA) and GHN-Online announced today that they will co-market online claims and electronic medical attachments between their respective health plan and provider clients. GHN-Online and NEA recently completed a clearinghouse exchange agreement, enabling healthcare providers and health plans to electronically transmit attachments to NEA for processing through GHN-Online all-payer clearinghouse.

NEA's *FastAttach*TM enables medical offices to transmit attachments via the Internet, to NEA's electronic repository where health plans can view and process them. "NEA is very excited to have been selected by GHN-Online. This effort will support GHN-Online's strong commitment in continuing to expand its online transactions and improve service to providers and health plans," stated Tom Hughes, CEO of NEA.

"We look forward to working with NEA. This agreement will enhance both organizations connectivity-reach and range of services enabling our customers to electronically exchange medical claims and attachments," said Azadeh Farahmand, President of GHN-Online. "This agreement is another step in our continuous efforts to deliver tools and solutions to streamline the revenue and payment cycle processes between providers and payers."

Medical claim attachments may include treatment authorizations, certificates of medical necessity, narratives, worker's compensation documents including first reports of injury and ER records, managed care carve out calculations and supporting documentation, detail itemized statement of charges, referrals, lab reports, or any other documentation required by a payer to adjudicate a health care claim. Attachments can also be exchanged between providers as necessary to meet patient care requirements.

This will help providers submit more of their claims electronically, accelerate claim processing, and eliminate the need to duplicate and mail attachments. GHN-Online and NEA anticipate this offering will help payers increase electronic claim volume, reduce in-bound mailroom expenses, and eliminate the time and expense normally required to handle, process, retain, and dispose of attachments.
